City could become hub of regional rail service

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

High-speed rail service will not just pass through Romulus. Instead, the city would serve as a regional commuter hub, according to representatives from the Great Lakes World Trade Center who addressed a special meeting of the Romulus Economic Development Corporation early this month.

GLWTC was directed by members of the corporation to assist in the preparation of a grant from the United States Department of Transportation which would fund a feasibility study. The motion by Theresa Washington was supported unanimously.

The city would be eligible for up to $1.5 million in grant money for the feasibility study, according to GLWTC consultant, John Ingram.

The grant would be received through the EDC but the study conducted by GLWTC so "the city would not incur any costs," said Mayor Beverly McAnally.

"Our intent would be to make the airport area the regional hub," said Ingram.

"Commuter rail service would connect the GLWTC, formerly the old Michigan Central Depot in Detroit, with Romulus, Ann Arbor, Lansing and Pontiac. At this point, it's undecided if the Romulus terminal would on or off the airport site. Nothing is cut and dried on this," said Richard Viskochil, EDC secretary.

"We're not sure it can be done. But we're optimistic," Ingram added.

Present plans for the old 18-story, 75-year-old building include total renovation completed within two years, according to Ingram.

"This depot will be patterned after the renovated St. Louis train station which is now the second largest tourist attraction in America, after the Washington Monument. This area is blessed with fantastic transportation resources, both buses and trains. With 18 blocks from city hall, just like St. Louis, it's a possibility a people mover from downtown might stop here," he explained.

He noted that Amtrack intends to stay and several bus lines intend to relocate on the site. Future plans include a shopping plaza and a multi-story parking facility.

"Or maybe a self-propelled train car traveling to Romulus at speeds of 125 mph. The entire project could cost around $300 million and provide high quality service. It would need good ridership, or it couldn't be done. The study would take about a year from the time we receive the grant money.

"Romulus would be the hub of the commuter operation. It looks good and the possibilities are tremendous. Your city has a very farsighted mayor who wants to see the city grow and thrive. If this project happens, everybody should come up smelling like a rose," he concluded.

Celebrity cop visits classroom

When Commander Gil Hill spoke before a Romulus Adult Education class, his smile was natural and the words came from his heart.

After his first movie role as Eddie Murphy's boss in "Beverly Hills Cop," the Detroit policeman is undoubtedly now a local celebrity.

Hill, however, said he's had quite a bit of success in his life. He spoke to the attentive audience as a friend and neighbor and responded to questions with a down home attitude.

"What's Eddie Murphy like? is always the first question someone asks me where ever I go. Well, I was real impressed. He is one of the nicest persons I've ever met in my life. When my relatives came on the set, he treated me like he'd known me for years. We have a super relationship.

"And don't judge him by his language. I just came back last month from making the sequel of 'Beverly Hills Cop.' I have to tell you, because of the language, you should be at least 30 years old to see it. But Murphy doesn't do drugs, nothing! Movies are entertainment. Don't get them mixed up with real life. Murphy is a super guy," Hill stated.

Hill fielded questions about parenting and the problems with youth and shared his own background with students.

"Since the release of the first movie, I now have a chance to return to the community some of the things it gave me. I have had quite a bit of success in my life. And very little of it did I do myself, hardly anything.

"I'm just an ordinary person who got a lot of breaks from a lot of good people. Someone always reached to help me. No way could I ever pay them back. So I do it this way," he said.

There's a lot everybody can do to help others, Hill said. "Find your own niche and put in your own two cents. Any way you can, make things better. What we do or don't do will affect us in the future," he noted.

He said the bottom line on plea bargaining, was that it does work although he said the juvenile court system does desperately need to be revamped. He believes the death penalty is unfair. "While investigating a case, I think capital punishment is okay. But no one is perfect. I never want to be the officer to pull the switch on an innocent man," he said.

He admitted to being moved to tears only once during his 16 years with the Detroit homicide bureau. "But often, I've been torn up inside," he added.

He said no one case is more important than another but some get more media attention than others.

"We have to help and look out for one another. After all, we're all reaching for the same thing. When you see someone who needs advice, stick in your two cents," he concluded.

Major fuel spill contained

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

Marine Pollution Control workers labored around the clock for five days to contain and recover more than 30,000 gallons of jet fuel spilled at Metropolitan Airport last week.

All the fuel has been recovered, according to Department of Natural Resources water quality specialist, Cathy Morse and Boron spokesperson, Nancy Heinen.

The spill occurred at about 9:30 p.m., Jan. 11, at Butler Aviation when fuel pumped from a Boron gas farm overflowed from an underground tank.

According to Morse, who arrived at the scene by 2 a.m., "A Butler Aviation employee discovered the spill at the fuel farm on the north side of Wick Road west of Middlebelt. Fuel overflowed from a hatch or vent on the top of the underground tank. One tank holds about 30,000 gallons," she explained.

Both the DNR and the Environmental Protection Agency were also immediately notified and watched the "spill be cleaned up to our satisfaction," said Mike Conway, airport spokesperson.

"There was no contamination of groundwater. The spill poses no danger to local residents. Only a few residents in Taylor complained about the odor," Morse said.

"Containment and recovery of the fuel continues to be monitored each day," Morse said. The fuel is being contained and recovered in five spots. The fuel spilled into the Sloss Ganong Drain which empties into the Sexton Kilfoil Drain and into the south branch of the Ecorse River. The last containment point is near Fort Street in Wyandotte, she said.

Heinen noted that 57,000 gallons of liquid, including some cattails, had been recovered as of Friday afternoon.

Marine Pollution Control is the company contracted to clean the spill. "Cleanup went real well. They did a good job," Morse noted.

The fuel was pumped via an underground pipe from a Boron gas farm on Ecorse Road near Telegraph.

Officials from the state and federal government will meet on Thursday and discuss the containment and how to prevent a recurrence in the future.

The cause of the spill is still under investigation but Heinen did note that something mechanical like a meter or valve might have been the problem.

"This is the largest spill I've ever encountered. When it takes a week to work on something, you know it's big," Morse stated.

Deregulation riles residents

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

The cable television picture in Romulus became somewhat fuzzy as residents complained about the recent 87 percent basic rate increase during the monthly meeting of the Romulus Cable Commission, last week.

The Tuesday meeting in the basement of city hall saw a "full house," according to Barry Baumann who with Ellis Pennington represented members of city council. Both members have been highly critical of the recent rate increase by Barden Cable Company.

The rate increase has occurred, according to cable company owner Don Barden, because of the federal deregulation within the cable industry.

However, according to the city attorney Barry Seifman, "The Federal Communication Commission rules state that only a 5 percent increase per year can be allowed.

"We have asked Barden to justify the increase as it relates to certain sections of that law. At this point, it's up to the individual to choose whether or not to continue service or disconnect it," he explained.

He noted that three cities including New York have filed a lawsuit challenging deregulation which is pending in Federal Appeals Court. "A decision should be reached within the year," he said.

Members of city council recently approved a resolution asking Barden to reconsider a more modest rate increase.

The former basic cable rate from Barden was $7.50 increased to $14. Prices for the pay channels were reduced from $9.95 to $7.

Barden said because a majority of homes subscribe to an average of two pay channels, the difference would be less than a dollar.

Helen Hay, cable commissioner, said, "The increase is going to hurt the little guy. Of the 2,623 subscribers in Romulus about 19.4 percent or 509 take the basic service."

"A cold spell caused an electrical power outage. That happens occasionally in this business."

Councilman Fred Block reported that cable subscribers were blacked out for four days in late December. Barden confirmed the blackout and explained, "A cold spell caused an electrical power outage. That happens occasionally in this business."

Residents at the meeting asked why their bills were not automatically credited for the outage.

Yvonne Murray, Barden general manager, said, "If you and give us your name and address, we will gladly credit your account. We need the documentation to give the credit. During that outage period, there was problem with our answering machines. But you still have to call in to get credit."

City battles treasurer

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

When Mayor pro-tem Mary Ann Banks shook her gavel at Treasurer John Lewkowicz and threatened to remove him from council chambers, she meant business.

More than once during the two-hour emergency meeting of members of the city council last Wednesday night, tempers flared and voices were raised.

All seven council members, the mayor and the treasurer gathered at city hall to discuss the hiring and firing practices and procedures within the city.

Council members and the treasurer threatened legal action against one another several times during the meeting.

Councilman William Wadsworth tagged the situation, "a hornet's nest." To several other individuals, the episode evoked memories of 10 years ago. At that time, Detroit news media referred to the infighting among the Romulus administration as a "Cuckoo's Nest."

The problem escalated after Lewkowicz hired a former union employee discharged in June of last year. The individual had worked for the city of Romulus for 12 years, and had been on a medical leave six months prior to June.

Personnel Director Marilyn Radford warned the treasurer of the danger or re-hiring the employee. She stated in a letter to Lewkowicz, "Additionally, we remind you that there are presently two cases involving this individual pending against the city of Romulus; one relative to her termination as an employee and two, a workman's compensation case in which her claim was that your conduct in office personally caused her great stress and mental anguish and contributed to her nervous condition." Lewkowicz responded, "untrue," to the second portion of the claim.

"We will file a lawsuit against the treasurer if we have to and if he doesn't follow the council's orders. We mean business."

"Such action on your part could result in monetary damages against the city and would not only be unwise but also foolhardy," Radford said.

Lewkowicz claims council members are trying to take away the rights and obligations of the treasurer's office. "This is a very serious violation of the city charter and state law," he stressed.

City Attorney Barry Seifman disagreed based primarily on the union status of the individual in question. "The city is subject to a contract with the Teamsters, State, County and Municipal Workers Local 214....The employer is clearly the city of Romulus with the mayor as the chief administrator officer being charged with its enforcement.

"What has arisen is a conflict between the city charter and the collective bargaining agreement," Seifman noted.

In such a case, the Michigan Public Employee Relations Act states when city charter conflicts with a union contract, the contract prevails. The State Supreme Court has upheld this ruling in several cases since 1981, according to Seifman.

Councilmembers unanimously approved a motion entered by Councilman Noah Bergeron which requires that all hired city employees be processed through the personnel department. Another motion was approved which directed the treasurer to obey the resolution.

"We will file a lawsuit against the treasurer if we have to and if he doesn't follow the council's orders. We mean business," said Councilman Barry Baumann.

The seriousness of the situation presented itself when the employee attempted to return to work in city hall the following morning and was met at the door by Radford and a Romulus police officer.

"They threatened to arrest the individual. That's a violation of civil rights. This is a public building," Lewkowicz said.

"These are irregular, unusual and peculiar actions. He's violated the union contract. The treasurer's office is not autonomous. We've been through this before. We don't want the old cuckoo's nest syndrome upon us again," said Banks.

"The person was fired improperly. There's no question. I have the right to hire and fire employees in my department. This employee has a right to this job," concluded Lewkowicz.

School for dropouts begins

Breaking from traditional high school education is a new program called Enterprise High at Romulus High School.

It targets local youth between the ages of 16-21 who are not currently attending school. The program begins Feb. 2 and will operate during evening hours, four days a week, according to Harold Connon, who with William Murphy coordinates the project.

"This will be quite different from the traditional high school program in that the training will be work-related. Students will produce goods and/or services for sale," said

Connon. Twenty individuals have so far registered for the course which began in the Macomb County area five years ago. "The program has been so successful there, they now have a waiting list for openings," he added.

Romulus is the first school in Wayne County to implement the program.

"We are not encouraging young people to drop-out of high school so they can enroll in this program. This program follows a different concept than traditional high school, and assumes that is why someone dropped out," Connon explained.

The focal point of the program in the integration of academics with hands-on experience.

Students can also work co-op. "They will learn small business management by establishing and operating a small business right in the school. Students learn best by doing," said Connon.

Interested youth or parents are directed to call the Romulus High School Vocational program at 941-2170 or the Adult Education office at 941-0610 for more information.

Students monopolize recycling

Do not pass go. Do not collect $200. In this particular board game, according to seventh graders at Romulus Junior High School, don't end up in the landfill with your old newspapers, crunched aluminum or broken glass.

Those items should have been recycled and that's the object of the new game the students have devised called, "Trash Trek."

Students in the environmental science class under the direction of teacher, Bill Thomas, created the innovative board game to enter into the second Annual Governor's Environmental Youth Awards Program. "Entering or supporting the program will enable you to learn more about the special beauty of Michigan's environment and natural resources," said Governor James Blanchard in his letter to students, sponsors and teachers.

The theme this year is "Solid Waste Management." People are encouraged to become aware of everyday habits and activities that can be changed to help protect the environment, according to Blanchard.

"Trash Trek," Thomas said, "was developed by the students to introduce the concept of recycling and trash management. Each player gets three solid waste tokens, newspapers, aluminum and glass. The object is get rid of them and go home without depositing them into a landfill.

"Labor problems, bad weather or ground water contamination are only some of the obstacles players can encounter. We want to reinforce the idea of recycling and abandon the idea of landfills," Thomas noted.

The project will be judged before Feb. 9 when, whether it wins or loses, it will be on display at the State Fair Camporama. The exhibit will be open to the public until Feb. 16.

Auto Show displays local vans

Almost half a million people strolled through the display of Advanced Creations of Romulus and their 18 customized vans at the 71st Annual Detroit Auto Show. The local business, owned by Bob, Diane and Mike Wolf of Belleville, is celebrating its 10th anniversary. Business at their Ecorse Road location has been so good, they recently tripled the size of the former building. Jim Stokes of Romulus, sales consultant with the company, noted it is the largest van customizing company in the state. "We've been very successful," he smiled and said. ANP photo by Bob Denys

Cool riders

It was a cold day for horses and their riders when Kristin Byberg (left) stopped to chat with Scott Karrenbauer and Ken Wrobel on Quirk Road. In the following days, the chilly weather brought several inches of snow and was better suited for cross-country skiing, sledding and tobogganing. ANP photo by Joan Mary Dyer.

dan's dogs

Puppies need the right start

When we buy a puppy, we get that second chance to void out the mistakes we made raising our children. As Joan Rivers would say, "It's true."

Not only do we get to spoil these new family members, but we don't have to concern ourselves with what family, friends or neighbors suggest because we're "experienced" in child rearing, and no one is going to intimidate us regarding our dog!

Those of us who were strict disciplinarians as far as our children were concerned have now become "understanding." Where we would never allow sassing or bad manners before, we now understand that our pup chewed grandma's antique chair leg because he was teething or lonesome. Those leather slippers received this past Christmas have become the pup's favorite pacifier and that's okay because, after all, he loves them and we wouldn't want to traumatize him by scolding or disciplining him.

No expense should be spared as far as toys and sweaters. And, yes, even leather booties are allowed here. This little joy will have the best of everything.

As for meals, if the pup won't eat his (ugh!) dog food, we can boil some ground round (never hamburger), chicken or chicken livers, purchase cartons of cottage cheese, etc. to provide all the protein needed for growing bones. Calcium pills are available in most pet stores for pup when his second teeth are due.

There are dozens of collars available. "Diamond"-studded types are most popular, but if the dog doesn't like a collar, he need not wear one.

If this pup is the breed requiring grooming, certain colors of bows or poms are requested for adornment. Not all dogs like red or blue. Lavender and pale green have become very popular except for scottish dan morris

terriers who, of course, will be seen in nothing but plaid.

Georgio perfume is most requested as the desired scent of many poodles, and Polo goes on the males being bathed and groomed.

Does all this sound eccentric or ridiculous? If so, you are not a typical dog lover, and it isn't necessary for you to read further. Any true dog lover will consider this article standard operating procedure. My wife certainly does. Nothing is too good for our dogs, and no criticism is warranted or accepted.

This is the greatest part of being a dog owner. It allows us the liberty to express affection without embarrassment and to indulge ourselves through our dogs in whatever expense or behavior we want.

Last, but not least, the dog must be enrolled in the best college you can afford. After all, today a degree from the wrong college can be a mistake that follows the dog his entire life. And we wouldn't inflict that stigma on anyone.

With a trained eye

Have you ever watched someone close their eyes as they concentrate, as though they are trying to visualize the object of their mental efforts? We know when we stop to think about it that most of us do that on occasion, but we notice it consciously while viewing it in others.

Closing one's eyes is a way, I guess, to focus our mind's attention on a mental image. It's as though we have books stored in our subconscious library, and we put in our mental "call number" and in so doing bring up the needed information for the review of our conscious mind.

Different people train their minds to work in different ways and therefore record information in ways that are dissimilar intentionally.

An engineer will most probably look at many things from a structural point of view. A person trained in one of the human sciences will no doubt tilt toward the human aspects of a situation, ... and so on.

As we close our eyes to see, we are attempting to visualize images recorded in our brain of a given situation or subject. But what is in our mental file is no doubt different in some way from that of others who may have been witness to the same occurrence as ourselves.

We each make our subliminal decisions about the importance of information. We then mentally record and file the information according to our own training, filing system, and our individually perceived importance of the matter.

So 12 eyewitnesses to an auto accident will give you 12 different versions of what occurred. Each may be certain of what he saw, and yet differ in interpretation of the circumstances from the image the other 11 have of the situation.

This newspaper is in the business of disseminating information. Some of that information has to do with public meetings, some of it has to do with social occasions, some it has to do with products and services available in the marketplace.

We tell people about crime, social problems, business developments, upcoming events of all sorts, and happy moments in the lives of people like you and me.

Many times our own inclusions or exclusions of detail make substantially little difference in the mental picture we, as a newspaper, attempt to convey to our readers about a given moment in the history of the communities we work so hard to serve.

The tools we have to work with are type on a page, photographs, illustrations, and, on occasion, color. There are, of course, more subliminal tools such as spacial relations of one article to another, type faces that are "bold" and in "caps" indicative of importance or "light face" and lower case or upper and lower type to downplay a headline. The size of the type, or the size and cropping of a photo can have an impact of the image recorded in the reader's mind. Sometimes a missing element can alter appreciably the view readers receive as they read a given story.

Few of the citizenry, who are in or out of the public eye, could withstand the scrutiny of their work that a journalist must endure.

Our reporters are trained to do their job with varying degrees of experience, and according to differing disciplines, just as doctors, attorneys, or chefs are of varying persuasions. Different folks, in turn, deal with situations in dissimilar ways.

By-and-large this is not to say that one is right and one is wrong, any more than one eyewitness report is right and another's view, faithfully reported, is wrong.

The question can come when someone suggests that a reporter intentionally has manipulated the facts, misquoted, or written a headline that leads one to an erroneous conclusion.

It is my experience that reporters, editors, and photographers in this business are serious-minded folks who believe in their mind that they are, with few exceptions, faithful to their readers in the conveyance of information they have prepared for the purpose of dissemination, sensationalizing national tabloids aside.

An allegation of wrongdoing is not a matter journalists take lightly. Few of the citizenry, who are in or out of the public eye, could withstand the scrutiny of their work that a journalist must endure.

It is a great disappointment that there are those who are so quick to chastise journalists, just as it is an inspiration to receive an occasional word or note of praise.

Yet reporters, editors, and photojournalists all know what comes with the territory, and are resigned to take the heat or get out.

At the risk of self aggrandizement, I take my hat off to our editorial staff, as well as all those who have served these publications now dating back one hundred years.

May all those who follow be as faithful in the performance of their charge as have those who have gone before them. Here's to journalism, ... imperfect though it may be. Let us always remember that it is better than the alternative.

See you next week.

sherry woodard speaking

But never boring

It's always a bit disorienting for a reporter to go to a new beat and such was the case when I began to cover the Canton beat four months ago.

Canton is a fast-growing and charming bedroom community. The change from farm town to boom town can be physically witnessed in its wide open fields, unpaved roads, and quaint farmhouses and barns juxtaposed with shopping centers, modern apartment complexes and a potpourri of fast food restaurants.

There's just one problem with this picture: the township is knee-deep in overflowing sewers.

After years of engaging in a tit-for-tat battle with North Huron Valley/Rouge Valley officials and later the Department of Natural Resources, Canton was granted a divorce from the much-troubled "Son of Super Sewer" project. A yet-to-be-realized project which some called "The Answer" to the sewer woes of western Wayne County, but which others called a dismal example of bureaucracy and poor planning run amok.

Leading that battle cry--the latter statement--was head cheerleader, Canton Supervisor Jim Poole.

Poole is a man so near and dear to the "Super Sewer" fiasco that, although Canton is out of the project, he carries documents and newsletters relating to it in his breast pocket. "Super Sewer" is literally close to his heart. "I've been following this thing for years," he said. Nobody else -- with the exception of the Plymouth Township Supervisor knows half of what he does.

It's hard to argue with him. He can quote you chapter and verse, points of sewage discharge into the Rouge River, important dates in the so far aborted birth of "Super Sewer," communities that have been included and then excluded from the project, etc....

It was thanks to this knowledge, although somewhat excessively displayed, that Poole pulled Canton out of the jaws of a project that probably would have cost the community a bushel of money without providing many--if any--benefits.

Say what you will about Poole, and many people do, he cares about his township and acted in its best interest.

Now that township officials will not have to maybe they will stop their battle with each other.

Over the past few weeks, Trustee Robert Padgett and Clerk Linda Chuhran have been doing just that.

At issue between the two is a matter centered around Padgett's personal life which probably would have been better left off the board's table--which is just where Chuhran placed it.

In one meeting the two threw verbal daggers at each other but, to the credit of both, they were later seen discussing calmly and professionally, a separate issue on which they also disagree.

The rift between the two appears deep and has some history to it, but if anyone can mend it, these two principled, independent thinking professionals should be able to. That's not to say they will ever invite each other over for dinner. But perhaps they can extend and exchange more professional courtesies. We'll see.

Until they do however there's no denying their bouts are entertaining and attention grabbing.

Say what you will about small-time township politics, but if you're talking about Canton Township you cannot say they are boring.

Township Board meetings are broadcast by Omnicom Cable and if I were at home on Tuesday nights, as opposed to being at the meetings, I would tune in. It's worth the price of admission.

Humane Society, veterinarian get praise

To The Editor:

I would like to publicly thank Dr. Tom Secor of The Michigan Humane Society in Westland for his recent treatment of our pet, Katie. He is a unique person and has a true concern for animals.

The Humane Society is fortunate to have him as a member of its staff.

The entire facility is well maintained and efficiently run. It is encouraging to know that animals can be cared for in such surroundings. Westland can take pride in having this office in their city.

Patient lauds Canton firemen

To The Editor:

May I take this opportunity to express my deep appreciation for Canton's emergency ambulance service in taking me to the hospital when I suffered a heart attack right after Christmas.

To my surprise I even received a get well card with the words: "Our thoughts are with you. We were glad to help you in time of need," from the fire fighters union. Now, that is service plus good community spirit. We citizens are proud of you and don't mind paying taxes for such deeds.

To The Editor:

Starting with psychics, mediums, spiritualists, tarot cards, tea leaves, palm readers, phrenologists, Nostradamus fortune tellers, astrology, the zodiac, U.F.O.'s, witches, dreams, ghosts, E.S.P., visions, miracles, etc.

When will this utter nonsense be discredited?

I know that some people believe this garbage and in my opinion are playing with one oar out of the water.

A fading custom? Funerals continue to serve a purpose

By RAY DAY
ANP News Editor

Death. Many Americans won't touch the topic for fear of offending someone or making him feel uncomfortable. But as one funeral director explained, death is a part of life.

Bill Crane, owner of Baum-Crane Funeral Home in Romulus, doesn't take the topic lightly. Crane said he understands the plight of families who grieve the loss of a loved one. He understands the need family members have for support and compassion. And he, too, understands the necessity and reasons behind the American funeral and burial process, a tradition that has come under fire from time to time from those that allege that the customary, three-day funeral is now obsolete.

Crane tends to disagree. "I think a lot of our tradition with funerals goes way back to traditions that started within the family. The funeral has always had a therapeutic value," said Crane. "We have funerals for the living. We all need contact and support from our friends, and a funeral is serving these purposes."

Foremost among the many reasons - psychological and practical - for having a funeral, Crane said, is contact with others. During the grieving process, individuals tend to experience all-time-high levels of stress and depression. Survivors generally must face the serious problems of adjustment, loneliness, sorrow and the simple tasks of day-to-day living.

Having a close relative or friend alongside to guide can make this "Funerals bring people together. We all need that kind of contact with one another."

trauma a little less painful, Crane said.

"Funerals bring people together. People come in on airplanes, and they travel long distances to come together. We all need that kind of contact with one another," said Crane.

Nationwide, the traditional three-day American funeral is losing popularity, Crane said. Many families are opting for "immediate disposal" - cremation and burial usually within eight hours of death. One reason for the new trend, the funeral director continued, is the rising cost of burials. As an example, Crane said the typical three-day funeral can cost between $3,000 and $8,000. Immediate disposal can be as inexpensive as $665.

But locally, the American custom remains intact, Crane said. Last year, with his funeral business up 40 percent, Crane estimated that 90 percent of all arrangements were the traditional funeral as opposed to cremation.

Some analysts say that the funerals spread out the immediate grief over the three-day time span, lessening its intensity. Others argue that a one-day funeral or cremation gets the entire process completed in a quicker fashion.

In addition, the open casket viewing of the body is becoming less preferred by some people, Crane said, although the vast majority of funerals still hold fast to the traditional open casket. Many psychologists still contend that an open casket is important for the living members of the family to actually see that the person has died. With an open casket, the potential for denial of death is diminished, and the natural grieving cycle of the body can continue.

On the other hand, some people are now specifying that they would prefer a closed casket in wills and pre-death contracts. According to Crane, an individual can enter into such a contract with a funeral home and deposit money for the expenses in the bank. Somewhat rare 20 years ago, these types of agreements are gaining in popularity each year, Crane said.

Even as trends come and go, Crane is confident that traditional America will still be shining through in funerals many years down the road.

Coping with the grief is left to the living

By JOAN MARY DYER
Belleville City Editor

Although grief is experienced at some time in everyone's life, individuals are often taken by surprise by their feelings, according to Diane O'Connor, a therapist at Woodcreek Council in Farmington Hill.

O'Connor has been a specialist in dealing with grief since 1980. In her work, O'Connor helps individuals to develop the coping strategies needed to see them through painful and difficult times. She aids people to work through and review their personal relationship with the deceased: that of love, joy, guilt, hostility and anger.

"People often say, 'no one has ever talked about death with me' or 'death was never talked about in my house, how can I talk about it now?'" O'Connor said.

"Initially, bereaved families are in a state of shock," O'Connor said. "Many times they report that they don't remember any of the events leading immediately up to or after the death. They are so overwhelmed by all that is happening that their emotions and feelings are numbed."

After the individual has been through the initial stage, emotions seem to flood in from all directions, according to O'Connor. She noted that people feel "bombarded with intense feelings of abandonment, loneliness, guilt, anger and sadness."

"It is not uncommon to feel anger to other people whose families seem whole," O'Connor said. "They tend to become angry at the unfairness of it all, for not only has the loved one died, but also the plans they had for the future have vanished."

The Farmington Hills therapist said that in the period of intense grief, people feel that "it will never end." People often feel angry that "everyone's life but their own is normal." There may be periods of feeling terribly lonely and empty, laced with intervals of happy memories, and there may be drastic changes in the eating and sleeping habits of the individuals.

"Each member of the family will have his own way of expressing and managing grief," O'Connor said. "For some, the emotional intensity will be experienced rather quickly, and for others, it may be less pronounced but more prolonged. The ability to experience the reality of death along with the feelings engendered will aid the person to cope and begin to put his life together again."

O'Connor and therapist Gene Hadwiger recommended that people who are grieving talk about their feelings with someone they can trust. They suggested that individuals seek the help of a professional if they feel they are not coping or feel under an extreme amount of pressure. Talking, they said, will get the individuals feelings out in the open and, when talking to a professional, the individual may be certain that their confidentiality will be protected.

"If you keep your feelings bottled up inside, you may begin to feel like a pressure cooker - like you're going to explode," O'Connor said. "That is the time to seek help and to find someone to talk to."

Death: A part of life

Don't ignore legal duties

By SHERRY WOODARD
ANP Staff Writer

Tending to that final legal task of "putting your affairs in order" is not something most people like to think about, especially those who are still in the springtime of their youth.

But you had better think again, says Attorney Nevin A. Rose of Westland.

Rose handles numerous cases involving wills and other estate affairs and he says you are never too young to draw up a will and make other arrangements for the distribution of your assets upon your death.

Although wills are not the only way to take care of the matter, Rose strongly recommends them.

"If it's a simple will, it's not going to be that much money," he said. In fact the State of Michigan offers free do-it-yourself wills that can be had for the price of a postage stamp.

Without a will, a deceased person's assets are divided up according to guidelines spelled out by state law, Rose said.

The laws governing such matters are known as Intestate Succession laws.

For those who have decided that a good life insurance policy naming the beneficiary of their choice is all they need, Rose has this advice: "Make yourself the beneficiary."

On the surface this does not make sense. Why would you need the money if you are dead?

Because, Rose answered, by naming yourself as beneficiary the money is in your name—even though you are deceased—and thus can be governed by the terms of your will.

The terms of an insurance policy supersede those of a will, he explained.

As an example, consider this: a man dies, leaving his second wife (his beneficiary) to collect $100,000 from his insurance policy. The man also leaves a will stating that his wife is to give a portion of the insurance money to his children from his former marriage.

Under the law, however, the second wife is free to keep all of the money and do with it as she sees fit. The terms of the insurance policy name the wife, not her deceased husband, as the owner of the $100,000.

Only had the man left the money to himself would he be free-through his will-to dictate division and use of the funds.

In cases where the deceased leaves nothing but debt, Rose explained, spouses and relatives do not inherit the burden of that debt—unless they cosigned agreements which extended credit.

"Let's say they have accumulated $10,000 in Visa card debts," Rose said, "and all they have is a check every week for $200 from the factory.

"If (Visa) finds out there's only a couple of used t.v.'s they're not going to hire a lawyer to go after that."

Rose said this happens regularly and creditors end up "taking a bath" when someone dies before their bills are paid off.

A spouse can be held liable only if that spouse co-signed for the loan.

On the other side of the coin, Rose said, the surviving partner of any joint account or asset automatically inherits that asset if the other partner dies.

According to Rose, the important thing to remember when taking account of your estate and deciding who should get what is, terms of ownership.

"I think the most important thing I could say to people," he said, "is they've got to get the proper ownership."

Make sure everything is in your name, he said.

Burial changes as prices increase

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

"Tradition", sings Tevye in the unforgettable stage and movie production of "Fiddler on the Roof" is as shaky as a fiddler on a roof.

And, when it comes to funeral services—although some traditions haven't changed—others have disappeared into the past.

Like when was the last time you saw someone raise his hat when a funeral procession passed on the street?

And, funeral services are beginning to be shorter and shorter. And most are opting for cremation rather than burials.

"Traditions are changing," noted Jerry Eicholtz who joined Lents Funeral Home in 1977. "And I believe that it's because society is changing. I hope we are not placing a value judgment on this change—because you just can't do that."

Eicholtz pointed to the fact that those opting for cremation rather than burial in a cemetery lot have doubled over the last year alone. In 1985 Lents handled 22 cremations while last year there were 41 from Lents alone.

The price of dying apparently has led to the increase in persons preferring cremation over the traditional cemetery burial.

To open and close a grave today it would cost approximately $600, that is not including the cost of the lot. Also, all cemeteries require a container for the casket and when you include the coffin costs, you looking at $2,000 without even considering other expenses such as church, organ, flowers—and others.

"Nowadays it is best to plan for death," Eicholtz stressed. "But, it is a very difficult issue. Something we don't want to think about. Something that will happen to someone else. Not to us.

"Therefore, people are usually not prepared when death occurs."

Eicholtz also said that the long lines of cars following the hearse to the cemetery are becoming history. He said that most funeral directors advise against them because "long lines of cars may result in accidents."

"In fact, some directors ask families to meet them at the cemetery."

"Times are changing, but you can be sure as Ben Franklin noted, 'Death and taxes will always be with us,' Eicholtz said.

'Homeshare'

New program unites seniors and families

Area senior citizens who are experiencing problems from rising house and utility costs are turning to the Information Center, Inc. for help these days.

Homeshare, a new housing option, is a program for active senior citizens in their 60's and 70's who are seeking to share their homes. In addition, families leaders of any age may be eligible for the program to help provide a family atmosphere and share household expenses.

Conducted by the Inkster-based Information Center, Inc., Homeshare is a free service which matches compatible people to live together, sharing living space to save money and provide companionship.

Many participants share similar interests and compatible lifestyles and are grouped in the same household. Before placing two families or individuals within one home, Homeshare first interviews and checks references from each applicant. If two people appear to be compatible, an introduction is arranged.

Choices are left up to the individuals in the program. The Homeshare staff, however, will assist with a sharing agreement to outline each person's expectations and responsibilities or to help locate other suitable candidates.

The Information is providing this program in cooperation with the Southeastern Michigan Council of Governments. For more information, call the center at 422-1052 or stop in at 26807 Michigan Ave., Inkster.

IN ADDITION TO BEING A BEAUTIFUL, WELL MAINTAINED, FULL SERVICE CEMETERY, (ground burial, cremation and mausoleum crypts) with very reasonable prices, United Memorial Gardens is a photographer's dream and a MAJOR TOURIST ATTRACTION IN SOUTH EASTERN MICHIGAN. United Memorial Gardens has a special appeal unlike that of other cemeteries. Over 81,000 people toured United Memorial Gardens in 1986. Historical groups, Bible scholars and patrons of the arts as well as American history teachers for classroom field trips were among the tour groups, which is almost a daily occurrence on our grounds. The Early American Country Chapel, ducks and swans and Abraham Lincoln along with George Washington, the American Flag, the Pledge of Allegiance, the Star Spangled Banner, The American Eagle, all in everlasting bronze make United Memorial Gardens a teachers delight. The Statute of Liberty will be erected in early spring. Many of our features in marble, graphite and bronze are originals, one of a kind, beautiful and very expensive.

Thousands of people; from the Salvation Army, Protestant, Catholic and Orthodox church groups in their busses, vans and autos are taking tours of the OLD TESTAMENT TABERNACLE, THE ONLY FULL SCALE DUPLICATION OF AN ORIGINAL TABERNACLE IN THE UNITED STATES WHICH IS IN FULL VIEW FOR VISITORS TO SEE WITHOUT CHARGE. FREE TOURS BY TOUR GUIDE TO GROUPS OF 12 OR MORE, WITH A BOOKLET OF THE TABERNACLE STORY.

Resident mounts impressive collection

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

The photo albums of Frankie Jean Clemens of Belleville bulge at the seams and overflow with autographed pictures, cards and letters from celebrities around the world.

"They always answer my letters," Clemens said from the living room of her Jackson Street home.

Many famous people solicit her advice and predictions. Some unfortunately have not.

If the former governor of Alabama, George Wallace had heeded her warning, he may have avoided certain gunshot injuries, Clemens noted. She similarly alerted President John Kennedy before his assassination.

She told vice-president Spiro Agnew to "straighten up" shortly before he was forced to resign from office.

Her scrapbooks reveal the human side of many public officials. John Wayne wrote, "To Jean, who has a gift for praise and poetry." Frank Sinatra told her to "keep writing beautiful poetry."

Her collection of photos and autographs are just the end product of a life-long hobby. Clemens also pursues music, writing, and gardening with a passion. And she loves animals. At one time she cared for 38 different pets at her home.

She maintains an absolutely positive outlook on life. Four years ago, she lost her husband of 41 years and their only son, Ernest Jr.

"I'm just getting things back to normal. I don't plan ahead like before. I try to live one day at a time," she explained.

ASSOCIATED NEWSPAPERS: When did you become aware that you have this clairvoyant ability?

CLEMENS: Ever since I was a little girl. I knew I was different from other kids. I was born and raised in Wyandotte on my grandmother's Pepper Road farm. She was part Cherokee Indian. I learned a lot from her especially about understanding my feelings. She also had a great musical ability.

I've always been able to feel certain vibrations in people. A lot of times, it's frightening, to other people that is. People call about the stock market, and ask for tips. They've learned to trust me.

Before we married, I told my husband not to go out and play football because he would need seven stitches across the bridge of his nose. It happened. Another time, a black cat crossed our path. I admit, I'm very superstitious. I knew something would happen and told him to turn the car around. Minutes later, we were struck head-on. No one was severely injured, and he never doubted me after that.

ANP: Did you ever study music?

CLEMENS: Never! I was born with musical ability. I've written and recorded my own music. At home now, I have two accordions, two guitars, an organ and a piano. I would be lost without music. I play every day. It's just a gift from God.

Frankie Jean Clemens

focus on people

A few years ago, I played the piano at Cobo Hall in front of thousands of dignitaries. They called me prodigy something. I can play almost any instrument and I've never had a lesson.

It's with music that I miss my husband Ernest the most. He was my best critic and always encouraged me. Our favorite song was "As Time Goes By." I still get teary-eyed when I hear it.

ANP: Why do you write to public figures and celebrities.

CLEMENS: I enjoy the feedback I receive whether they appreciate it or ignore it. My letters go around the world. I tell them what I like and don't like about what they're doing. Of course, I suggest changes. Their responses are always cordial.

ANP: How did you start doing this?

CLEMENS: In 1966, I dreamt I was going blind, and wrote a poem called, "Oh, to be able to see," about that experience. I mailed it to then Governor George Romney. He wrote and encouraged me to publish it. I did. He said I had tremendous ability. And I credit him with giving me my first break. We corresponded often since then.

ANP: Who are some other celebrities and public figures you've written to?

CLEMENS: I received letters from Cardinal Richard Cushing of Boston and "Jim Cagney" just before they died. Governor William Milliken said, "warm wishes."

A few years ago, I played the piano at Cobo Hall in front of thousands of dignitaries. They cal-

Other officials like Coleman Young, Richard Austin, Bill Lucas, Jerry Cavanaugh, Ted Kennedy, Jerry Ford, Barry Goldwater, Bess Truman, the Johnson and Carter families, they all mailed photos signed with my name. Here's one of Richard Nixon. I always knew he'd make a comeback. Reagan's been sending me photos since he was governor of California.

Helen Keller, Arthur Godfrey, Buster Crabbe, Lucille Ball, Bing Crosby, Groucho, Cary Grant, and Bob Hope, said "Thanks for the memories" of course. Jimmy Durante loved me. He always sent me a letter. Henry Ford II was "my boy." This signature of Elvis, I think might be worth something.

ANP: Do you have any predictions at the present time?

CLEMENS: Look for these things in the future: Joseph Kennedy will become a rival for a White House position, and a Kennedy will become president of the United States.

President Reagan must still be careful of his health and life. Dark shadows are still around him. His close, trusted friend will turn against him and write a book to reveal all.

After the death of teamster president Roy Williams, who's serving time in prison, papers will be found that will shake the up the union and the world.

This is the year I'm going to break the Guinness World Book of records with the largest bean. So far, I've been able to grow one up to 54 pounds. The world record is 99 pounds. Even so, it's won me seven county fair ribbons.

I can't help it, I love life and I love people. It comes natural.

Grief sessions set in Plymouth

Dealing with grief may be an easier task if there are others to share experiences with and a specialist in the field to offer tips in coping with the problems of death and dying.

Grief therapist Diane O'Connor meets monthly with the Horizons Survivors Support Group at the Plymouth Historical Museum on South Main Street in Plymouth. O'Connor is affiliated with Woodcreek Counseling in Farmington Hills and has specialized in grief therapy for the past seven years.

In past sessions, O'Connor has helped group members deal with terminal illnesses, the death of a child, coping with the holidays and the reality of death. Dealing with suicide was the group topic in January.

The following meetings are scheduled between 7:30 and 9 p.m. in the lower level of the museum building:

- Feb. 16 - "It's Dark, It's Cold, I'm Lonely, I'm Scared"
- March 16 - The Razor's Edge: Depression and Despair
- April 20 - Starting Over. It's the Pits!
- May 18 - How to Find a Purpose When My Purpose is Gone
- June 15 - Socializing Again: It Seems so Awkward

The series of grief therapy group sessions is sponsored by Schrader Funeral Home, 280 S. Main St., Plymouth. Admission to the sessions is free.

Cemetery is also for the living

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

When visitors step onto the sacred grounds of United Memorial Gardens in Plymouth, they step into the religious history. But they are not alone.

Last year, 87 church buses filled with students, Bible scholars, seminarians and art patrons toured the 146-acre cemetery.

Two couples were married in the Early American Country Prayer Chapel. Children and families picnicked in the idyllic rural setting seven miles in the country, or they swam in a 20-acre lake on the property. Several infants were baptized here.

Owner, Ed Wensley, who started with five acres 33 years ago, encourages visitors to this "tourist attraction." "It's even listed by the state of Michigan. Bring your camera," he noted.

"Our Freedom Garden is unique to the United States," he explained. "It's our biggest attraction along with the Old Testament Tabernacle, a exact replica of the Hebrew tabernacle built by Moses for the children of Israel, according to the book of Leviticus in the Bible. The golden angel statues alone cost $8,000."

Wensley offers self tours, guided tours or cassette presentation tours. "It's open to the public and free of charge," he said.

"We want to make the cemetery experience more personable to the family. At the time of death, people are so emotionally upset. We want to help eliminate that fear. By developing the cemetery as a tourist attraction, people can see it's more than just a place to bury the dead," Wensley noted.

Beautiful bronze and granite sculptures stand amidst the manicured lawns of the 28 different gardens, each with a different theme. There are Korean, Islamic, Turkish, Indian, Chinese and Catholic gardens.

"The whole cemetery is based on religion. We try to adhere to the burial customs of all races, nationalities and faiths. We are a full service cemetery. We provide above or below ground burial or cremation," he said.

Wensley began in the business 44 years ago. Today, his son Delbert manages the day to day operations.

"This is a family cemetery. Counselors will meet with family members after a death. They want to help ease the loss of a loved one," he explained.

The University of Michigan Garden is dedicated to those who have donated their bodies for medical research. Last year, 6,500 individuals were cremated and buried in the garden. Hundreds of people attend the burial ceremony which occurs about three times a year," he said.

"The Prayer of St. Frances, the Star Spangled Banner, the American Flag, the Pledge of Allegiance, Abraham Lincoln, George Washington and the Statue of Liberty, and even Raggedy Ann and Andy all have a special appeal to the patron of the arts and the general public. Next to the chapel is a restored 1900 horse drawn hearse," he noted.

There are three types of cemeteries, according to Wensley, the city/municipal cemetery, the religious cemetery and the memorial cemetery. The first two are referred to as tombstone cemeteries and are either maintained by the taxpayers or are non-profit.

Memorial cemeteries were first established in Michigan in 1929 by a group of attorneys. They developed a cemetery for all races and for profit. Today there are 11,000 cemeteries in Michigan, 127 of those are the memorial type.

United Memorial Gardens have buried 39,000 individuals and cremated another 7,000.

The two are planning a spring 1987 wedding.

With United Health System
and John Hancock's SelectCare, you're covered for emergencies no matter where it hurts.

Just present your SelectCare card and you have the name of John Hancock to back you — a name that's recognized everywhere.

Here are some other things you won't have to worry about.

Keep your doctor, choose one of our doctors, or choose one from outside the SelectCare Network (and still receive generous benefits).

Select different doctors for each member of your family, if you prefer. Select a new doctor whenever you wish.

Choose your favorite hospital, whether in the SelectCare Network or not, and still receive generous benefits.

There are no deductibles, no claim forms, no hassles with the SelectCare Network. No kidding.

Innovative health care is what United Health System and John Hancock's SelectCare is all about. SelectCare is a Preferred Provider

Organization (PPO), a designation for a select group of hospitals, physicians and services. It's considered innovative because you can choose from our select group of "providers," the SelectCare Network, or you can choose other hospitals, physicians and services for a nominal out-of-pocket cost. Either way you save on costs over traditional coverage but retain maximum flexibility and choice.

Names you can trust: Beaumont, Oakwood, Providence and Saint John Hospitals are the founding hospitals of the SelectCare Network. And, of course, SelectCare is offered in association with John Hancock, one of the most experienced insurance companies in the world. We feel confident that their choices are among the best in the health care business.

Call 1-800-732-9602 if your employer offers SelectCare for comparisons with your current coverage and answers to your questions.

Super sandwiches stack up to good taste

By CHEF LARRY JANES
ANP Special Writer

chef larry janes

The trouble with sandwiches is that they are so easy. Hardly anyone has any respect for them, which is too bad. Given a little attention, they can be not only inexpensive and quick to make, but really delicious. It's all a matter of trying.

Especially with "Super Bowl Sunday" just around the corner, don't slave away in the kitchen, do some imaginative grocery shopping and allow your intuition to do its thing.

If you want to make a serious sandwich, one that commands respect, start with good bread. With all due respect to Wonder, you can stuff it with the rarest roast beef, the creamiest of imported cheeses, the tangiest of mustards, but without a great bread, it's still "just a sandwich!"

Personally speaking, a baguette or mini loaf of French bread with a crust that is hard, dark brown and covered with seeds or herbs and a center that is chewy and perfectly flavored is just what this doctor ordered. To locate one of these delectable loaves, find a bakery that specializes in French baking and call around to ask about their baguettes."

If the bakery doesn't know what they are, make another call. It will be worth the added time and travel, especially if the bakery makes them the old country way. Of course, if you're serving domestic beer and fritos, a loaf of dark Russian rye or a coarse, cracked wheat will suffice.

When it comes to fillings, everyone has his own ritual of stacking overly-flavored luncheon meats and prepackaged sliced cheeses. This Super Bowl will surely be a memorable one when my sandwich is stuffed with grilled andouille sausage (hearty, robust and with just the right spiciness) and grilled red peppers. Don't try to brown whole sausages and expect them to sit placidly between the bread. Take the sausage and cut it crossways into thin slices and lay the slices in a hot skillet. That way, you get the flavor from the fat, and most of the fat will melt away.

Meanwhile, place a red pepper under the broiler and blister the skin. You will have to turn the pepper every few minutes or so. The entire process will take about 20 minutes. When the skin is blistered all over, drop the pepper into a paper bag and twist the bag shut so that no air can get in. Leave the pepper there for 15 minutes and shake gently. The skin should just peel off.

Cut the pepper into pieces about 2 inches wide, being sure to remove all the seeds and white membrane inside. Cut through any curves in the pepper so that the pieces are absolutely flat. If you fail to do this, the sandwich will not stay together or be flat.

Next, put a large saucepan filled with water on to boil. Core a large fresh tomato and drop it into the boiling water for a second, then run it under cold water and peel the skin off. Since winter "hot house" tomatoes tend to have tough skins, this will ensure a tender bite every time. Cut the tomato into the thinnest slices you can unless you want to imitate Dagwood Bumstead when you eat the sandwich. The tomato will lend moisture as well as flavor. The main flavor, however, will emanate from the sausage and the contrasting sweetness of the pepper.

Now, for the most important addition, pour a little good olive oil (something imported and extra virgin would be nice) into a bowl or deep plate. Using a small brush, coat the cut side of each piece of bread with the oil. Lay the ingredients on one slice, top with the other slice and pour yourself a glass of hearty red wine (preferably a good hearty burgundy) and serve.

If you don't like meat, a similar tasty sandwich can be made by mixing ricotta cheese with a few, fresh chopped herbs. Don't forget the pepper, tomato and oil for the true "piece de resistance!"

So forget the same old "baloney" and try something different with a little class!
Bon Appetit!

Baking is in chef's blood

Donna Ancinec learned to cook like many women, from their mother at an early age. She had one advantage. She married into a family of chefs. Both her brother-in-law and cousin on her husband's side of the family are trained chefs.

"I learned a lot from them," Ancinec said. "They taught me several different techniques. One happens to specialize in pastry and the other in entrees. It's the best of both worlds."

Ancinec lives with her husband Bradley and their 3-year-old son, Joseph. They are expecting their second child in March. When Ancinec isn't cooking, she is busy working full-time at Annapolis Hospital.

"My mother cooked a lot of ethnic food. She's polish. Me, I'm half polish and half maltese. My favorite food is italian. I love spaghetti.

"Most of the cooking I do is for the family. And all the big family dinners are in our house, especially Thanksgiving. Twenty people are the most I've ever cooked for. That's enough.

"My son's a good eater for a little kid. It surprises me what he eats. He likes broccoli, Brussels sprouts, all that stuff.

"I've always enjoyed cooking. My mom always allowed me to watch her. It just came natural to me," she said.

The following her favorite cookie recipe:

SPRITZ COOKIES

- 2 1/2 cups butter or margarine
- 7 1/2 ounces cream cheese
- 1 1/4 cup sugar
- 2 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
- 5 cups flour

Tint with color appropriate for holiday season

- Cream butter and cheese.
- Add sugar, cream well, add vanilla.

Add flour slowly and mix well. Fill cookie press.

Form onto an ungreased pan using star plate, make circle, then pinch together.

Put sugar on top.

Bake at 375 degrees 8-10 minutes.

'Bookworm' turns into author of private eye mysteries

By JOAN MARY DYER
Belleville City Editor

Bookworms take note. Despite the teasing and derogatory remarks directed at the compulsive reader, sometimes the worm turns and the reader himself becomes a writer.

Before Rob Kantner became an author, he had a reputation as a bookworm. Going through old family photographs Kantner has noticed that he either had a book in his pocket or his nose was in a book—often to the dismay of his family and friends.

In a talk sponsored by the Friends of the Fred C. Fischer Library Saturday, Kantner told the audience that from his earliest days he was interested in reading. At the age of 17 when Kantner "knew what truth was" he wrote what he described as "a terrible book." Kantner winced as he recalled his very ambitious but disastrous first effort.

In his adult years Kantner continued to write and was encouraged by some positive feedback from editors—even when they didn't purchase his works. His forte, he discovered, was the mystery story and in 1982 two of his short stories, "Cinnamon Twist," and "C is for Cookie" were published in Alfred Hitchcock's Mystery

playtime

Magazine. Four more of his short stories were published in 1983 and five were accepted in 1984. At the present time some 19 of his short stories have appeared in the Hitchcock publication. In addition, one of his stories appeared in Mike Shayne's Mystery Magazine.

At the same time, Kantner continued to work on his novel. Naively, he said, he attempted to have it published himself without success. However, after acquiring an agent, Kantner's "The Back Door Man," a private eye mystery, was published by Bantam Books. A second book, "The Harder They Hit," is scheduled to appear in book stores in a month or two. Kantner is now negotiating for what he hopes will be a series of books for Bantam.

A Westland resident, Kantner has placed the setting of his stories in nearby Belleville and the area surrounding the Motor City. Perkins—his detective hero—is chief of maintenance at a 300-unit apartment complex on Ford Lake when he is not solving mysteries. Kantner brings local color into his stories but deliberately changes some names and facts to protect the innocent, or may be the guilty.

Inspiration for his stories comes from anywhere, Kantner said. Sometimes a title precedes the story, like in "Cinnamon Twist", which fell into place after he heard someone order a cinnamon twist at a restaurant. Another story idea came from his wife who often serves as a sounding board for his ideas.

"Sometimes it makes me feel guilty to be in the midst of a terrible situation and think to myself 'I can use this in a story,'" Kantner said.

The author begins his work day two hours before most of his audience and readers have had their first cup of coffee in the morning. He begins his writing at 4:30 a.m. and sets a goal of two hours of writing before he leaves for work as an advertising/marketing executive in Ann Arbor. Like many writers, Kantner works best under pressure and must discipline himself to complete a specified amount of copy each day.

Writing is very difficult work, he told the audience. "I hate writing, but I love finishing a story."

Kantner formerly resided in Romulus and his wife is a graduate of Wayne Memorial High School.

Alcohol abuse is topic of video tapes

The potential devastating effects of alcohol abuse will be the topic of a series of video tapes available for viewing by area schools, service organization, concerned groups and agencies.

A joint effort of the Wayne 29th District Court, Annapolis Hospital, Wayne Police Department and Cablevision Industries, the program takes a fresh and impacting approach to educating the public about the consequences of drunk driving.

For information on using the tapes, call 467-4628.

VEGETARIAN PITA

1 whole wheat pita bread
1 -8 oz. can red kidney beans, drained
¼ cup thin slivered green beans
¼ cup crumbled feta cheese
¼ cup chopped parsley
2 tbsp. pine nuts or toasted sesame seeds
2 tbsp. chopped onion
1 -8 oz. can garbanzo beans, drained and crushed
4 tbsp. olive oil
3 tbsp. red wine vinegar
1 clove garlic, crushed
½ tsp. thyme, crushed

Cut the edge off the pita so it can be stuffed. Set aside. Blend together the kidney beans, green beans, cheese, parsley, nuts and onion. Set aside. Combine remaining ingredients into a dressing and add bean mixture. Toss to coat. Stuff the pita with mixture and enjoy.

SHRIMP BUNS

4 fresh, large crusty rolls
½ cup Hollandaise sauce
¼ cup sour cream
1 tsp. lemon juice
dash dill weed
1 lb. cooked shrimp, chopped
½ cup finely chopped celery
8 pimento stuffed pitted olives, chopped
bibb lettuce
Mix first six ingredients together. Split and lightly butter rolls, fill with shrimp mixture and add lettuce. Chill before serving.

CURRIED CHICKEN SALAD SANDWICHES

3 cups cubed, cooked chicken
1 cup celery, diced
1 tart apple, diced
1 can (11 oz.) mandarin oranges, drained
½ cup macadamia nuts, chopped
1 cup mayonnaise
2 tsp. curry powder
1 tsp. salt
¼ cup crumbled blue cheese
Combine all ingredients and mix well. Chill, then stuff between bread or rolls and garnish with a kosher dill.

2. In Memoriam

IN LOVING MEMORY OF Vernon L. Duke Jr., sadly missed by all. GOD grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change. COURAGE to change the things I can, and the WISDOM to know the difference.

With love, your sisters Jackie & Rosie

3. Card of Thanks

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT Holy spirit, You who make me see everything and who shows me the way to reach my ideals, You who gives me the divine gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me, and You who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you, no matter how great material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory. Amen. Persons may pray this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3rd day, wish will be granted no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this dialogue as soon as your favor has been granted. M.S

Belleville title express picks up momentum

Tigers extend Wolverine 'A' Conference win streak to 6

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Jumping to a 16-4 first period lead, Belleville crushed Lincoln Park 70-35 Friday night to remain undefeated in the league and in the driver's seat of the Wolverine 'A' Conference basketball world.

Coach Leon Birdyshaw's ca-

gers are 5-0 and sole owners of first place in the conference.

"The kids are gaining confidence with each game," said Birdyshaw after the lopsided victory over the Parkers.

"This one came easy, but we don't expect many more like it in the stretch."

Ahead by 12 at the end of the first period, for all purposes the game could have been called at half time when the Tigers had built up a 35-11 advantage. Belleville, with its second string in the lineup most of the second half, outscored their rivals 20-16 and 15-8 in the final two periods.

Kris Grantham, who has been the mainstay of the team, scored six points in playing less than 10 minutes of the game. The Tigers had only two players in double figures - Ladion Tait led all scorers with 14 while Derrick Duffin connected on five baskets for 10.

Earlier in the week Belleville needed a rally to shake a pesky Wyandotte quintet. The Tigers survived the scare, 56-49, as Chico Crout provided the heroics with his outstanding defensive game. Crout managed to force the Bears into numerous turnovers and Grantham was the beneficiary of the "feeds" that led to easy layups.

Wyandotte went ahead 10-8 after the first eight minutes, then Grantham pumped in eight of his game high 16 points in the second period as the Tigers came out in front 26-17 at intermission. The Tigers increased their margin to 39-29 at the end of the third, but the Bears made a run for it in the last period, however, some

Romulus rips Ida, 86-65

After a frustrating, last second setback at the hands of Willow Run, Romulus bounced back and destroyed Ida 86-65 Friday night to improve their overall basketball record to 3-5 on the season.

Billy Johnson scored 12 of his game high 26 points in the first period to stake the Eagles to a 24-15 lead that they never relinquished. Romulus enjoyed a 45-29 lead at halftime as Coach Dan Henry had an opportunity to empty his bench early.

"It's been a frustrating season for this team," said Henry.

"And, after losing to Willow Run on Tuesday I just didn't know what to expect. These kids rebounded beautifully."

Juan Street and Samuels Keith also hit in double figures for the winners and they were instrumental in controlling the boards. Street tossed in 12 baskets for 24 points and also hauled down 15 rebounds while his partner, Keith, contributed 16 points and 13 rebounds.

However, the Eagles still have their problems making their percentage shots as they sank 39 from the floor and only 4 of 12 from the charity stripe.

Romulus had ample opportunities to beat Willow Run but muffed them, losing a 53-51 decision in overtime. Ahead by four in the last minute, Johnson missed the front end of a one-and-one allowing the Flyers a chance to come back for a basket. The Flyers tied it after an Eagle turnover, sending the game into the extra period where they outscored their rivals, 3-1.

Huron 'inside game' is hurting

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

When your biggest man is only 6-3, you expect to get hurt on the boards.

And, without their 6-3 forward-center, Doug Marmion, New Boston Huron found the going tough Friday night against Airport. Airport rallied from a 19-18 first period deficit to edge Coach Larry Swick's Chiefs, 89-73 in a conference basketball contest.

The game was falling right for the Chiefs until Marmion sustained his third personal early in the third period and was forced to the sidelines. Airport came back and outscored their rivals 24-14 and 29-17 in the middle quarters to capitalize on Huron's misfortunes and hand the Chiefs their fifth loss against one victory in the league.

Swick, in his second year as Huron's head coach, said, although the loss was disappointing, his team is beginning to jell.

"We are starting to do some things right," he said. "We lost four games - to Woodhaven, Jefferson, Mason and Carlson by less than four points and we are improving. And, that's all we can ask of these kids at this time."

Marmion finished with 17 points despite missing more than a quarter. Teammates John Umin and Andrew Jackson chipped in with 15 and 12 points respectively, while Dave Watson added 10.

Airport got 24 points from Lamont Billingsby and Daryell Ossburg accounted for 23.

'Gold' eludes Belleville wrestlers

It's been a long time since Belleville High wrestlers have ever been shut out from gold medals at an invitational.

But, that's what happened last week at the Plymouth Canton Invitational where Coach Gerald Malecek's Tigers settled for four second places and three thirds in finishing third in a field of eight teams.

Lakeshore Stevenson dominated the tournament, amassing 192 points to beat out Livonia Stevenson for the team championship. The Livonians had 151 points while Belleville garnered 130.

Belleville came up with a silver in the 119-pound class where Tim Clearwood was decisively defeated by Lakeshore's Jason Cluss, 19-0. The Tigers got their second silver thanks to the performance of Rob Lucas who lost a 11-3 decision to another Lakeshore representative, 138-pounder, Tom Tokarz.

Dave Brendtke brought home

a silver when he lost via a 9-4 decision to Matt Cluss. Belleville's fourth silver medalist was Joey Yuhass who forfeited to 126-pounder, Dave Streje, also of Lakeshore.

Belleville matmen fall to Romulus

The showdown between two area wrestling powers fizzled last week as undefeated Romulus turned back Belleville, the defending Wolverine 'A' Conference champ, 34-22.

Coach Wayne Schimming's Eagles claimed eight of the 13 weight classes, winning four by falls.

"It was a good meet for us and an excellent tune-up for the Monroe Invitational," Schimming said.

Here are the results of the meet:

Romulus wins Monroe title

Schlener is invitational's MVP

Romulus continued to prove it has one of the best all-around wrestling teams in the area as Coach Wayne Schimming's Eagles captured the 1987 Monroe Invitational over the weekend.

Led by undefeated Jim Schlener, who has stretched his personal winning streak in the 138-pound class to 33 successive wins, Romulus won the Monroe crown with relative ease.

Romulus garnered 197 points to emerge from the field of 10 with the title. The Eagles were trailed in the final team standings by Dundee (124.5), Monroe Jefferson (120), Monroe (107), Adrian (96.5), Saline (95.5), Tecumseh (71.0), Monroe Catholic Central (64), Ida (62) and Carlson (50.5).

The Eagles, winners of the Westland John Glenn, the Trenton and their own invitational, received four gold-Schlener has won all 33 of his matches this season and is ranked among the best 138-pounders in the state.

medal winning performances including that of Schlener who was also awarded the tournament's Most Valuable Wrestler and got the "Hustler's Award" after winning in the finals on a technical fall over Jim Morgan of Carlson, 20-5.

"Jim has been doing a tremendous job for us this year," Schimming noted.

Also striking gold at Monroe were heavyweight Steve Anderson, 98-pounder Tony Venturini, 145-pounder Jon Bergman, and Mark Dudyak, a 155-pounder.

Anderson pinned Carlson's Neal Owen in 4:33 to receive his gold, while Venturini, who is also boasting a perfect 32-0 record, disposed of Andy Trosch of Dundee in 4:33 for his first place. Bergman won a hard-fought 6-4 decision over Adrian's Jaimes for his gold, while Dudyak also came through with a 3-0 decision in the finals over Saline's Weidmayer.

Romulus came away with a pair of silvers thanks to 105-pounder Charlie Crosby who lost to Monroe's McLennon in the finals via a pin; 132-pounder Rick Champagne was decided by Adrian's Perez 7-5 in the finals.

Fourth place medals went to Romulus's Tim Kosikowski (112), Bruce Boyd (119), Dennis Corder (126), and Trevor Asher (198).

Romulus will return to the mats on Thursday at home to an always tough Ypsilanti and will head downriver on Saturday to compete in the Melvindale Invitational.

Tigers

clutch foul shooting by the undefeated league leader kept them ahead.

Belleville capitalized on 11 of 16 from the foul line with Grantham sinking 4 for 4 in the last eight minutes. Anthony Bellinger and Brantley also hit on 2 for 2 at the foul line.

Belleville begins the second round of conference play Friday night at home to Trenton, a team that caused the Tigers a lot of problems in the first time around.

"We were nine points down over there (at Trenton) and managed to win a close one," Birdyshaw said. "We have to come ready to play against them."

Belleville dunks Southgate Anderson

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Belleville swam back from its first Wolverine 'A' Conference setback at the hands of Monroe last week to bury the newest member of the league, Southgate Anderson, 127-47.

Coach Bill Snider's Tigers captured nine of the 11 events with Wally Rochowiak providing the winners with two of those victories. Rochowiak won the 200-yard freestyle event with a 1:58.9 and also stashed away the 100-yard freestyle for the Tigers with a 54:41 effort.

Snider used the line-up of Dave Traskos, Eric Lawson, Mark Duda and John Kapitani to win the medley relay event (1:53.81), while the 400-yard freestyle relay team of Duda, Mike Ackron, Lawson and Snider turned in the winning time of 3:35.0.

Ackron also won the 200-yard individual medley with a 2:14.0, while Snider touched in first for the 50-yard freestyle (24.4). Belleville had the top diver at the meet with Raul

Estrada (215.55), while Dan Fancher's 5:26.8 was the best time for the 500-yard freestyle event.

Scott Overholt captured the 100-yard breaststroke event in 1:12.0.

"We had an opportunity to move a lot of people around," said Snider, who has served as head coach for the past three years. "I felt that we did a good job."

Snider said that state-ranked Monroe has the edge on the conference championship. "They (Monroe) are ranked as high as second in the state, but some feel that they are the best team this year."

Belleville's Dan Brown (42) and Maurice Brantley (32) are in control of this rebound. The Tigers ripped Lincoln Park to remain in control of the Wolverine 'A' Conference title race.

Group plans hospital takeover

By MARK NICHOLAS
ANP Staff Writer

Southwest Detroit Hospital Corporation, Peoples Community Hospital Authority, Oakwood Hospital and Garden City Osteopathic Hospital recently announced a proposal to develop a coalition to assume the operation of Westland Medical Center.

The announcement followed several weeks of intensive discussion which resulted, according to SDHC, in the conclusion that a combined effort by the four organizations would offer an increased opportunity to improve the scope of health services available in western Wayne County, and create a financially viable future for Westland Medical Center.

According to Wayne County Commissioner Bernard N. Kilpatrick, who also serves as Chairman of the Wayne County Health and Human Services Committee, the plan will involve some changes. "The plan is to turn Westland Medical Center into a sub-acute care facility, a mental health and drug abuse center."

The plan, according to Kilpatrick, has been in the works for some time. "There have been mentionings of something like this for over a year. The southwest group began admitting financial problems about a year ago." Kilpatrick added that southwest was in trouble from the start. "They were more than a million dollars in

Proposal draws protesters

A group of about 20 nurses didn't let the snowstorm Monday interfere with their vigorous protests against the administration of Westland Medical Center.

The nurses, joined by Wayne County Commissioner Kay Beard, are members of the SEIU Union, which is presently attempting to negotiate a contract with the hospital administration.

According to Bonnie Popplin, a registered nurse at the Medical Center, the negotiations are not going very well. "They. (the hospital administration), are not willing to inform us at all," Popplin said.

In a statement released by Beard Monday, she outlined some of the major reasons for the demonstration.

According to Beard, the reduction in care and services that would come about as a result of a coalition takeover was a major consideration for the picketers.

debt when they took over three years ago, and they have been losing money ever since. This plan would alleviate their major financial problems."

Officials from Southwest Detroit Hospital Corporation were unavailable for comment on the plan as of presstime Tuesday.

According to Marlene Hayman, assistant vice president for marketing and public relations for Oakwood Hospital (one of the hospitals involved in the coalition) there is a definite goal for this planned coalition. "The four hospitals involved plan on developing a new corporate entity." Hayman went on to say that such specifics as when this will happen, or a possible new name, are just not available at this time.

There are, according to Hayman, some gray areas on which the four hospitals have yet to reach agreement. "I don't believe the four organizations have come to a total agreement as yet. There are still unsolved concerns as to how all the various components would fit together." Hayman also mentioned that community needs are a consideration. "How each hospital will serve the needs of the communities is still a major concern that lacks an agreement."

Kilpatrick added that there was an additional concern that he addressed at a special emergency meeting with Deputy Wayne County Executive Michael Duggan on Tuesday morning. "We found out that the hospital (Westland Medical Center) could promise medical care for the indigent under this plan, even though they couldn't provide it. So we asked that doctors be on staff to care for the indigent.

When confronted with a mental illness, families experience a wide range of emotional responses. From outrage to shame and denial. They often blame victims for causing worry, embarrassment, family strife. And they often blame themselves.

But mental illness is no one's fault. Least of all those afflicted. It's a serious medical illness. Recognizing the warning signs and seeking treatment for your loved one can be the first steps to reducing family fears and confusion. And to actually healing the sickness. Today, mental illness need not be hopeless. Learn more. For an informative booklet, write: The American Mental Health Fund, P.O. Box 17700, Washington, D.C. 20041. Or call toll free: 1-800-433-5959. Michigan Bell Service Bulletin

Important: Action you must take if your phone number begins with 697 or 699.

Now you have a choice of long distance companies for Dial 1 Plus service. Don't leave that choice to chance.

Watch the mail and make your choice soon.

If you have not already received it, you soon will be getting complete information from Michigan Bell by mail, along with a ballot listing your choices of Dial 1 Plus long distance companies. Your Dial 1 Plus options and the steps you should take are described in detail. And you will be given the date by which you must make your selection to avoid having a long distance company randomly selected for you.

If your phone number does not begin with one of the numbers above, don't worry. You will be notified when your area is ready for Dial 1 Plus service.

What is Dial 1 Plus?

Dial 1 Plus is simply dialing "1" plus the area code (when necessary), plus the telephone number to complete a long distance call outside of your LATA. Companies offering long distance service can now offer you the same Dial 1 Plus service previously available only to customers of AT&T.

Don't give up your right to choose.

As part of the restructuring of the telephone industry, you must choose a company for Dial 1 Plus service or such a company will be chosen for you. Should this happen, it will be a random selection by computer. We urge you to make your own choice—because a company selected at random will not necessarily be one that best serves your specific needs. The information you receive will include telephone numbers for the various long distance companies, so you can easily look into their services and charges before you make your choice.

Need more help? Let's Talk!

Michigan Bell cannot recommend a long distance company, but if you have any questions about Dial 1 Plus service, or if you have misplaced the ballot we mailed, just call the Michigan Bell Let's Talk Center at this toll-free number:

Balance household budgets for piece of mind

By RAY DAY
ANP News Editor

Income tax time brings a renewed concern for household finances, as well as many first-time efforts at home budgeting, according to Christine Venema, home economist for the Wayne County Extension and Education Center in Wayne.

Such a fiscal plan for managing the home finances is a good idea, Venema said, although it can also look much better on paper than it does when put into action.

Venema explained that many individuals set out at the beginning of the year with a blueprint of their future finances in hand. While most people don't end up with deficit spending equal to the $1 trillion consumed annually by the federal government, many consumers fail to account for all income and expenses and find themselves with a budget that doesn't actually work.

Three common budgeting mistakes plague most households, Venema said. These are:

- Forgetting to allow for those expenses that don't come up on a regular basis - insurance premiums, seasonal clothing, vacations, holiday gifts, etc. When those payments do arrive, money budgeted for other items must be used. An emergency fund is one way to provide for these irregular expenses.

- Being unrealistic about budget expense figures. If you know you can't manage on $150 a month for food, allow more than that amount in your budget.

- Budgets that are too vague. It's a good idea to have more categories than you really need in a budget, but avoid using such broad categories that you really

business at home

don't know where your money goes.

If constant overspending in a certain budget category becomes a problem, Venema suggests a reworking of the figures to get more money into that troublesome space.

"If you really want to save but find you can't seem to do it with a budget, eliminate it from your budget," suggested Venema. "Pay yourself before you begin to spend for other items."

Another consideration for sound financial management, the home economist said, is to add up all assets and liabilities. Don't forget any, Venema said, and don't try to fool yourself.

If the list of liabilities far exceeds the list of assets, elementary mathematics proves a financial situation that is in the red, Venema said. Such a picture should signal a need for financial reform.

In addition, income tax time comes another financial concern, Venema said, aside from the concern for getting that statement to the proper governmental offices by April 15.

"If you normally get a large income tax refund, consider adjusting your W-4 with your employer so that less is withheld," said Venema. "This will give you more money each month to work with."
